DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-7, 11-13, 18-20, and 24-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Harrison et al. (2004/0167467 A1). Harrison et al. disclose a method of cooling a target tissue inside a body comprising providing fluid cooled below normal body temperature and blood at a normal body temperature to a target tissue to maintain the tissue at a temperature below normal body temperature. See page 2, paragraph 0032. The blood at normal body temperature is provided to the target tissue when the seal from the balloon (24) is removed. The blood at normal body temperature can also be provided to the tissue region by mixing it with the cool fluid which is usually saline and delivering the saline and blood together. See page 6, paragraph (0063). Harrison et al. also disclose that the providing of normal blood and cool fluid and the occlusion of the vessel is performed by a catheter (22) and balloon (24). Harrison et al. also disclose to maintain the tissue region between 28 and 36 degrees Celsius (page 1, paragraph (0003), use the procedure to open a lesion (page 7, paragraph (0072), and use a control system to provide fluid and blood.

The applied reference has a common inventor with the instant application. Based upon the earlier effective U.S. filing date of the reference, it constitutes prior art under 35 U.S.C. 102(e). This rejection under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) might be overcome either by a showing under 37 CFR 1.132 that any invention disclosed but not claimed in the reference was derived from the inventor of this application and is thus not the invention "by another," or by an appropriate showing under 37 CFR 1.131.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 8-10, 14-17, and 21-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being obvious over Harrison et al. (2204/0167467).

In regards to claims 8-10 and 21-23, Harrison et al. disclose the invention substantially as claimed. Harrison et al. do not disclose the specific amount of time to maintain the temperature of the tissue below normal body temperature. However, these parameters are deemed matters of design choice, well within the skill of the ordinary artisan, obtained through routine experimentation in determining the optimum results.

In regards to claims 14-17, Harrison et al. disclose the invention substantially as claimed. Harrison et al. disclose to occlude a body vessel and then provide cool fluid to the tissue region and then remove the occlusion to let normal temperature blood into the region. However, Harrison et al. do not disclose to repeat the method as is recited in claim 14. It would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the method of Harrison et al. by repeating the method to prevent the temperature of the tissue region from reaching normal body temperature.

The applied reference has a common inventor with the instant application. Based upon the earlier effective U.S. filing date of the reference, it constitutes prior art only under 35 U.S.C. 102(e). This rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) might be overcome by: (1) a showing under 37 CFR 1.132 that any invention disclosed but not claimed in the reference was derived from the inventor of this application and is thus not an invention "by another"; (2) a showing of a date of invention for the claimed subject matter of the application which corresponds to subject matter disclosed but not claimed in the reference, prior to the effective U.S. filing date of the reference under 37 CFR 1.131; or (3) an oath or declaration under 37 CFR 1.130 stating that the application and reference are currently owned by the same party and that the inventor named in the application is the prior inventor under 35 U.S.C. 104, together with a terminal disclaimer in accordance with 37 CFR 1.321(c). This rejection might also be overcome by showing that the reference is disqualified under 35 U.S.C. 103(c) as prior art in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a). See MPEP § 706.02(l)(1) and § 706.02(l)(2).
